In Memoriam

Dr. Matthew Howell Reaser

Founder Of Edgewood Park

With fondest and sincerest appreciation the Class of 1948 wishes to dedicate The Sketch Book to Mr. and Mrs. Shannon Wallace for their kind, considerate, and unselfish assistance.

Through the fall tennis and winter skiing seasons when the old girls are brushing up on their techniques, and the new girls are trying their wings, Mr. and Mrs. Wallace can be seen standing on the side lines giving cheerful and enthusiastic advice.

In the time we have been privileged to know them, these two understanding people have captured our hearts. They will always remain dear in our memories.

At Edgewood Park,
Here stands the school,
Where girls are taught
The "Golden Rule."
And how to type
And how to take
A letter down
Without mistake.
And how to swim
And how to ski
And how to dodge
Around a tree.
And how to golf
And how to skate,
In both these games
They're up to date.
And how to dance
And how to sing,
In fact they teach
'Em everything.
Now when they pass
Out of this school,
They'll use this wisdom
As their tool.

Dear Lord, as now I face the world,
I'm thinkin' hard of you.
And thought's come to my head
Of things that I should do.

I shouldn't get so gosh-darned mad
At people that are weak.
I shouldn't find it awful sad
To see 'em all so meek.

I know that I should grin and say
When people vex me so,
"Don't worry! There's another day
That won't seem half as low."

I always say the first remark
That comes into my mind.
But most folks, Lord, don't like that spark
Of truth I think is kind.

So help me, Lord, and see me through
And bless me with Thy grace,
So I can make this world by You
A fuller, better place.

When you are busy with your chores,
And haven't got a minute
To stop an' listen to the world,
And everybody in it.

Jest take one second from your day,
An' hark to someone's troubles.
It sure don't do you any harm
An' friends will come in doubles.

An' when you stop and weigh that time
Against the friends come from it,
You'll find that friends outweigh the hours—
And you'll be glad you done it!

WEST POINT

If I can see the right of way,
If I can worship every day,
If I can have the urge to find,
Then shall I have a woman's mind.

If all I do is clean and good,
If all my thoughts are understood,
If I can have a million friends,
I'll have the comfort loving lends.

If I can hear and sympathize,
If I can speak and tell no lies,
If I can see the way to start,
Then shall I have a woman's heart.

If I can pray when things are wrong,
If I can sing a happy song,
If I can laugh through tears of strife,
Then shall I lead a woman's life.

If I can help to lend a hand,
If I can search and understand,
If I can hold back every sigh,
Then shall I hold my head up high.

If I can have the gift of smile,
If I can concentrate the while,
If I can think, and thinking, know,
Then shall I block the hardest blow.

If I can love, when yet unbidden,
If I can keep my sadness hidden,
If I can walk and never plod,
Then shall I have my peace with God.

The Edgewood Girl of '48

The battleship Missouri's illustrious career has penetrated and become a vital part of each one of our lives. We were born in a depression; we are graduating into a confused battle-scarred world. As a result, our viewpoints are more liberal; we have professed our independence; yet a glance into the senior smoker proves that we've maintained our youthful idealism.

Stan's "Dutch" is the center of a noisy group of bridge enthusiasts, argyle knitters, and apple munchers. The juke box impresses us with the strains of "Civilization," while we overpatronize Nabisco's delicacies, Texas Fritos, ice cream sandwiches and gallons of orange juice. The nine-fifty P. M. "Happy Hour" finds us stampeding toward the food counter clad in a vivid variety of night creations, dull blue jeans, swing-back rain coats and, of course, our hair is twisted into cotton socks.

In typical feminine contrast, the six o'clock dinner bell draws us down the marble staircase in the "new look," short sleek hair creations, tiny waists, twelve-inch ballerina skirts, with taffeta petty coats peeking, and sheer black stockings.

Have our fundamental interests really changed? No, we're still subscribing to issues of Vogue, Cue and Life Magazines. Our weekends in New York still take shape under the clock at the Biltmore, only to move on to foreign restaurants and then to Greenwich Village. Uncle Sam's gray clad Boy Scouts beam over the wall eagerly awaiting the weekly Edgewood taxi. Of course, Princeton, Yale and Dartmouth weekends are still holding their own on our social schedule of events.

Now for a look to a former decade!

The Edgewood Girl of '38

Not that we wish to revive the cliché, "those were the good old days," but this era's typical Edgewoodite is less burdened wtih worldly wisdom, more concerned with the affairs of her immediate surroundings, and worrying about overcrowded stag lines, rather than a successful United Nations. As to her feminine characteristics, they differ only materially from ours today.

Let's take a bus ride to White Plains and meet our '38 sister at Schrafft's after a session with Jeanette McDonald and Nelson Eddy in Maytime. She's wearing a mid calf tweed skirt, a cashmere sweater held neatly in place by a tiny leather belt. Around her neck she wears a scarf pulled through a highly polished fraternity ring. To give her the sophisticated extra height, her shoes are blessed with three-inch heels, while only the lightest shades of real silk stockings grace her long legs.

On the way back to Edgewood Park she is humming Cole Porter melodies, arguing about conga techniques and almost demonstrating "The Big Apple" in the bus. Inscribing her latest slogans and signatures on her trenchcoats also concerns her, as well as who will smudge her "ugly" clean saddle shoes first.

We meet her again in study hall, sneaking in a bread and butter note on pastel shade, delicately initialed note paper; of course, her ink blends harmoniously. In the tea room, she too takes advantage of smoking hours, in between crunching potato chips, sipping lemon cokes, and chewing Hershey kisses.

Her book shelves are lined, not with pocket book editions, but with five-year diaries, popular song sheets, and the latest issues of paper pulp literature. The walls of her room are plastered with Harvard and Penn State banners while chintz drapes and matching bed spreads give the four walls the finished touch.

Yet, after all, who are we, only a grammar school crowd in '38, to judge and accurately describe our senior sisters? Their offspring are now well on the way to a future career as the '58 students of Edgewood Park.

Class Will

We, the graduating class of 1948, do bequeath our confusions, our frankness, and our good intentions to those who will follow in our steps.

Who's Who

College Preparatory Division

Class Will

We, the Senior Class of 1948, bequeath to the lower classmen our typical assets and idiosyncracies to be either forgotten or improved upon. To the Junior Class we leave the hope that they will maintain the traditional feeling of comradeship which exists between the Junior and Senior classes.

To Mrs. Alice Billings, our faculty advisor, we leave our sincerest appreciation for her profound interest in each individual and her spontaneous sense of humor.

Nancy Bickelhaupt relinquishes her love of always rushing madly around to anyone who knows where she is going.

Phyl Carter wills her infectious smile to some happy junior.

Joan Charles leaves her lovely, light brown, cardboard closet to her roommate, Betty.

Jo Cherry wills her Texas phone calls to Betty Butler.

Bobby Crookes bequeaths her extra fat to CARE.

Polly Day leaves her versatility to an aspiring actress.

Mary Fallon bequeaths her perfect posture to Miss Johnson's corrective class.

Rosemarie Fitzgerald wills her calorie chart to the John Power's School.

Greta Gustafson leaves her weekend rides home to anyone with such an obliging father.

Jane Hartt wills her foods class coffee cake to Miss Southall.

Emeline Hedges bequeaths her prolific correspondence to anyone more conscious of her writing habits.

Gladys Hirsch leaves an eager eye focused on the mailbox.

Mary Margaret Lackey bequeaths a vivacious personality for all to remember.
Diane Lee—ves.

Joan Lupton wills her roses to Goldfarb's.

Bittie McGar bequeaths the trials of learning how to smoke to a sooty chimney.

Joan Merrill leaves her Hopi dancing to those who can figure it out.

Elise Nicol leaves without a nickel.

Bunny Orel bequeaths her cute giggle to a stick-in-the-mud.

Nancy Pelletreau wills her worries to the wind.

Joan Richards bequeaths her painstaking script to a tired teacher.

Mary Selecman wills her memory for song lyrics to Burl Ives.

Leona Ulanoff leaves her history blushes to a new shade for Max Factor.

Elise Van Dam bequeaths her active lungs to a deserving barker.

Miss O'Brien is willed a battered collection of untidy room slips.

We Edgewoodites now leave with tearful eyes, however, the fun, frolics, and more serious moments will remain clear in our memories always.

Dear Rusty, so much
It has been fun knowing you, & hearing from knowing you, & hearing all those F.H. classes together too bad we never made it down the hill - Hope you make good in radio, the suit, up look pretty good! love, Lil
